The Creation of Singapore Airlines

From a single plane to an internationally respected brand, almost 60 years of innovation and service has propelled the growth of Singapore Airlines to become one of the world's leading carriers with an advanced fleet. We began with three flights per week, and today our route network spans 90 destinations in almost 40 countries. Years ago, Singapore Airlines was the first to offer free drinks and complimentary headsets. More recently, we pioneered inflight telecommunications services and unparalleled inflight luxury. Next year, we will be the first to put the world's largest plane into service.

From First Flight to Soaring Height

In May 1, 1947, an Airspeed Consul hurtled down a tiny airstrip in Kallang, Singapore. As it took flight, so did an airline, Malayan Airways.

Over the next two decades, the company steadily acquired more planes. There were additions of the DC-4 Skymaster, Vickers Viscount, Lockheed Super Constellation, Bristol Britannia, Comet IV, and the Fokker F27.

In 1966, a year after the country of Singapore became independent, the company was renamed Malaysia-Singapore Airlines. As the Airline grew, so did revenues which hit the S 100M by 1968.

The Singapore Girl Is Born

When French couturier Pierre Balmain designed the sarong kebaya uniform, the internationally recognized image of the Singapore Girl debuted. The new look of the Airline evolved further with its first Boeings - three B707s, then a fleet of B737s.

In 1971, London's River Thames came aglow with a spectacular display of fireworks when our first transcontinental flight arrived, and in 1972, Malaysia-Singapore Airlines separated into two new entities - Malaysia Airline System (now Malaysia Airlines) and Singapore Airlines.

This change was used to launch a new, more modern service approach on the airline. To house a special fleet of B747s, B727s, and DC-10s, the new Singapore Airlines also boasted a new airfreight terminal and a B747 hangar.

A Reputation for Inflight Firsts

The 1980s brought a number of firsts. Our fleet continued to grow, in impressive and historic ways. We had the first A300 Superbus, the first B747-300 Big Top, the first B757, the first A310-200, and the first B747-400 Megatop which was used to operate the first-ever non stop commercial flight across the Pacific to the United States.

In the 1990s, Singapore Airlines revolutionized inflight communications and entertainment through the KrisFone - the first global sky telephone service - and KrisWorld offerings. At the same time, we sought to further improve our unparalleled fleet, placing a US 10.3-billion order for 22 B747-400s and 30 A340-300s in 1994, a US 12.7-billion order for 77 B777s in 1995, and a US 2.2-billion order for 10 A340-500s in 1998.

In 2000, the Airline placed an US 8.6 billion order for 25 units of the world's largest commercial plane, the A380. The behemoth will enter service with Singapore Airlines in 2006, another world's first.

The Highest Service Today

Singapore Airlines today is built solidly on our history, from the designer bone china flatware to the Bulgari cologne for First Class passengers, to our advanced fleet of aircraft and motivated employees.

Health Asia

The Premier Health Event of the Region

Today, our inflight service is of the highest order, with signature dishes designed by a panel of nine international culinary experts, a wine list selected by three of the world's most discerning wine consultants, and even a select collection of more than 30 games for children from the Nintendo Game Boy series for children.

In 2000, Singapore Airlines became a full member of the global Star Alliance and with it came "seamless" worldwide air travel. With the extensive network of partner airlines, connecting flights, frequent flyer points, and baggage clearance are now a breeze.

Singapore Airlines' route network reaches out to over 90 destinations in close to 40 countries.

A Future of Firsts

The year 2004 saw the inauguration of the world's longest non-stop commercial flight on Singapore Airlines' A340-500 between Singapore and the US. Designed for the business traveller, the A340-500 placed a premium on customer comfort and convenience. It shortened travel time by up to four hours and featured just 181 seats in a spacious two-class configuration.

Following on the success of the A340-500 and its many aviation firsts, 2005 has seen Singapore Airlines become one of the first international airlines to offer inflight internet access through their partnership with Connexion by Boeing. The service has already been rolled out on select routes, with more to be added as 2006 approaches.

And in that magical year of 2006 Singapore Airlines will make Aviation history when the Airline will become the first Airline to operate the world's largest aircraft, the Airbus A380.

The future promises to bring more firsts like these, as we at Singapore Airlines, continually strive to better serve our passengers and drive quality service through innovation.

Our Modern Fleet

From the beginning, Singapore Airlines learned that investing in the future means being the safest, youngest, most advanced, and fuel efficient planes in the skies. (The average age of our passenger fleet is 5 years 8 month - this excludes the A310-300s and surplus B747-400s which have been decommissioned.) That tradition continues today with the addition of ever-more advanced aircraft. Learn more about our fleet below.

'Gamat Emas' is a rare species of sea cucumber, classified under holothurians, which is rich in mucopolysaccharides, chondroitins, protein, vitamins A and C, thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, iron, manganese, calcium, magnesium and zinc. It had been used for ages in the Malaysian traditional medicine.

After more than 10 years of scientific research conducted in

Health Asia

The Premier Health Event of the Region

Malaysia and Japan, 'Gamat Emas' was confirmed to enhance the body resistance against various diseases including common flu, diabetic, cancer, gastritis, abdominal condition, migraine and skin diseases. It contains a cell growth factor which has the ability to accelerate the regeneration of biological cells, bone, collagen and rejuvenates skin.

The Healin products come in the form of consumable emulsions, massage cream, toothpaste and skin treatment cream.

The AG 2000 has product range of facial cleanser, skin nourishment, skin protection and skin treatment. The main ingredient of Gamat Emas extract in the AG 2000 helps the body to produce natural collagen, to delay and reduce fine lines. For those in the need of well researched traditional health products, Healin and AG 2000 are the proven solutions.

Sky Glory is currently looking for strong committed agents to distribute our products in Pakistan. Besides gamat products, we will also introduce more well researched traditional medicine from Malaysia.

PharmEvo

Launched in 1999 with an entirely different mindset i.e. nurturing & promulgation of wholesome cultural values along with our corporate goals, PharmEvo did create a stir

We as a nation are experiencing challenges of handling and preventing endangered values, for example, reading habit that has such an enormous implication in defining nation's refinement and civility. Appreciating and addressing this urgency we have engaged ourselves in printing and disseminating a variety of books on literature, to match our philosophy, including Golden words vol. 1&2 (motivational quotations), Pen pricks (humorous quotations), Bayaz vol. 1&2 (gems of Urdu poetry).

We are also trying to resurrect auld lang sine by spot lighting the work of muslim scientists through our corporate books Muslim Scientists & Scholars & The Great Legacy. Furthermore Quran - The Ultimate Miracle (presenting Quranic miracles in relation to the modern-day scientific discoveries), and the Calendar 2005, (scientific interpretation of selected verses of Ghalib, Iqbal and Mir) are also examples of our marketing ingenuity.

Besides, PharmEvo actively participates in conferences, seminars, health walks and take pride in rewarding extraordinary performers through Gold Medals and scholarships. The pharmaceutical industry and medical profession recognizes PharmEvo not only as an ethical, professional and progressive organization, but also as a trailblazer for the pharmaceutical industry. The vision is clear, the confidence is sky high, and the dream seems to be within the grasp, the dream of a healthier society.
